CHAPTER II.

LAND ADMINISTRATION.

17. For Revenue purposes the Chiefship is divided into two Parganas, each Parganah consisting of the following Tehsils :—

Phulia Parganah	...	{	1. Shahpura including Dhikola.
		{	2. Phulia including Naharsagar.
Kachhola Parganah	...	{	1. Kachhola.
		{	2. Ulela.
		{	3. Redwas.

Each Tehsil is under the charge of a Tehsildar who in Parganah Phulia is directly subordinate to the Revenue Musahib, and in Parganah Kachhola to the Kamdar of Kachhola as well as to the Revenue Musahib.

18. Munshi Mahabir Prasad, a lent Government Officer of the Ajmer Commission, continued to be the Revenue Musahib in charge of the Revenue as well as Survey and Settlement work.

19. The Survey was already completed last year and 10 villages only remain to be formally assessed.

20. The Settlement work has been carried on, on the lines laid down by Sir Elliot Colvin, who advised caution in the assessment work, which work he said should be gradual after gaining experience in the already assessed villages. This work is very important and delicate, inasmuch as it is to be done in such a way that both the State and the tenants may have no cause for complaint. The Revenue Musahib has now got to complete this assessment work and the compilation of Settlement papers, and to frame a Revenue Manual for future guidance.

The assessments hitherto made have been accepted by the tenants, for the principle is that if the cultivator gets his full crop the Raj too gets its full rate, otherwise the Raj shares its revenues proportionately with the tenants. Moreover, the rates will not be enhanced for 12 years. The rates no doubt will fluctuate between minimum and maximum standards, according to the sources of irrigation and the nature of the crops sown in the harvest.

The irrigated cotton in the Kharif and the irrigated Rabi Crop (not sown in Kharif) pay three-fourths of the rate, all other crops irrigated in Kharif pay half in Kharif and if resown in Rabi pay the remaining half; similarly unirrigated crops if manured pay half and unirrigated unmanured pay only one-fourth of the rate, moreover lands of all classes sown in the harvest which yield produce less than seed are not assessed, and if the produce is fodder only eight annas per Bigha is charged.

Thus it will be seen that the tenants have all possible advantages. A bad or famine year may otherwise badly affect the tenants, but there are all possible concessions for good and bad years in the system of the proposed assessment.

In my tours I have asked the tenants what they think of this system, and they say that they have after their two years experience found no particular defect.

On the face of it no doubt the system seems somewhat laborious as well as intricate, but in practice it is very simple as the tenants say ;

1. No produce (less than seed) no rate to pay.
2. If there is fodder, annas eight per Bigla, which is not a big sum.
3. Irrigated Cotton in Kharif and Rabi crop pay three-fourths of the full rate.
4. If sown in both crops, equal rate in each crop.
5. These rates are again divided according to manured and unirrigated manured crops. The former paying half the rate and the latter one-fourth the rate.

Rajadhiraja Sir Nahar Singhji enjoys a personal salute of 9 guns.

CHAPTER II.

LAND ADMINISTRATION.

17. For Revenue purposes the Chiefship is divided into two Parganas, each Parganah consisting of the following Tehsils :—

Phulia Parganah	...	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Shahpura including Dhikola. 2. Phulia including Naharsagar.
Kachhola Parganah	...	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Kachhola. 2. Ulela. 3. Redwas.

Each Tehsil is under the charge of a Tehsildar who in Parganah Phulia is directly subordinate to the Revenue Musahib, and in Parganah Kachhola to the Kamdar of Kachhola as well as to the Revenue Musahib.

18. Munshi Mahabir Prasad, a lent Government Officer of the Ajmer Commission, continued to be the Revenue Musahib in charge of the Revenue as well as Survey and Settlement work.

19. The Survey was already completed last year and 10 villages only remain to be formally assessed.

20. The Settlement work has been carried on, on the lines laid down by Sir Elliot Colvin, who advised caution in the assessment work, which work he said should be gradual after gaining experience in the already assessed villages. This work is very important and delicate, inasmuch as it is to be done in such a way that both the State and the tenants may have no cause for complaint. The Revenue Musahib has now got to complete this assessment work and the compilation of Settlement papers, and to frame a Revenue Manual for future guidance.

The assessments hitherto made have been accepted by the tenants, for the principle is that if the cultivator gets his full crop the Raj too gets its full rate, otherwise the Raj shares its revenues proportionately with the tenants. Moreover, the rates will not be enhanced for 12 years. The rates no doubt will fluctuate between minimum and maximum standards, according to the sources of irrigation and the nature of the crops sown in the harvest.

The irrigated cotton in the Kharif and the irrigated Rabi Crop (not sown in Kharif) pay three-fourths of the rate, all other crops irrigated in Kharif pay half in Kharif and if resown in Rabi pay the remaining half; similarly unirrigated crops if manured pay half and unirrigated unmanured pay only one-fourth of the rate, moreover lands of all classes sown in the harvest which yield produce less than seed are not assessed, and if the produce is fodder only eight annas per Bigha is charged.

Thus it will be seen that the tenants have all possible advantages. A bad or famine year may otherwise badly affect the tenants, but there are all possible concessions for good and bad years in the system of the proposed assessment.

In my tours I have asked the tenants what they think of this system, and they say that they have after their two years experience found no particular defect.

On the face of it no doubt the system seems somewhat laborious as well as intricate, but in practice it is very simple as the tenants say;

1. No produce (less than seed) no rate to pay.
2. If there is fodder, annas eight per Bigha, which is not a big sum.
3. Irrigated Cotton in Kharif and Rabi crop pay three-fourths of the full rate.
4. If sown in both crops, equal rate in each crop.
5. These rates are again divided according to manured and unirrigated manured crops. The former paying half the rate and the latter one-fourth the rate.

All these conditions have been printed in the Pattas given to the cultivators showing full details of their lands and the rates of crop classification referred to above, and the concessions enjoyable by them in case of the failure of crops, so that it is now very easy for an ordinary village Banya or a sensible cultivator to ascertain his revenue and cesses for the harvest.

21. It is not only in Khalsa portion that the above system has been given effect to, but it has been introduced in the villages owned by Rani Sahiba and the Rajadhiraja.

22. The Native States have their own way of doing things by Lata and Kunta. To change the system all at once so as to suit both parties was not an easy task, and it was reserved for Munshi Mahabir Prashad to suggest a new system which had the approval of the late Agent to the Governor-General in Rajputana, Sir E. Colvin.

So far the system is easily understood. It has necessitated the introduction of new forms of Khasra, Khatuni and other connected papers and it would be the duty of the Chiefship to maintain them in their integrity.

In fact this work has been so far done with great discretion and economy and the final figure of Land Revenue for the entire Chiefship is expected to give a decent increase.

23. The total area cultivated during the year was 55,474 bighas or 34,660 acres, as against 54,357 bighas or 33,973 acres in the last year.
